

Debriefing Document

Thank you again for participating in our study. Before we wrap-up, I'd like to let you know that the purpose of this study wasn't actually understanding the daily activities of older adults. The real purpose of the study was to understand the greatest needs of nursing home residents and their attitudes toward assistive technologies, such as robots or other devices. We didn't fully disclose this, because we didn't want to influence your answers to the interview questions. This way we get a better understanding of the needs of nursing home residents.

Do you have any questions for me about this or the study overall? If you have any questions later, please contact me with the information on the consent form, and I can answer your questions. Again, thank you for help with this study, and here is your compensation for participating.

Hands compensation to participant with receipt for payment.
